

Summary

Summary:

This study aims to try to propose an effective strategy for agricultural investment that enables Algeria to achieve food security in the long term by benefiting from pioneering international experiences in this, as some countries were chosen as a model based on the classification of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to the most important countries that succeeded in achieving The goals of the World Food Program, and care was also taken to choose experiments in a way that allows diversification of agricultural investment fields, thus leaving it out of plant production and extending it to all areas of the agricultural sector, such as animal production, forest plantations, fish and marine biology, and investment T in the field of irrigation water security is water-based food security.

As the descriptive analytical approach was adopted for the purpose of describing and analyzing the strategies adopted by those countries, and at the same time diagnosing the development of agricultural investment policies in Algeria, including its allocations and problems and the measures taken by the government to confront them, during the period 2000-2017, then analyzing the impact of these investments on indicators and axes Food security in the same period, which drew a clear-cut picture of the negatives and shortcomings in which agricultural investment policies previously occurred, as well as the gains they achieved in achieving food security.

The study reached a proposal for a strategic plan to improve the indicators of food security in Algeria by the year 2022, whose vision is to achieve healthy and sustainable food security in all its nutritional dimensions and varied according to the nutritional needs of the population, resulting from the intensification of agricultural investments in the strategic and irrigation food sectors in which Algeria has a competitive advantage , With the need to focus on training and attracting the human element (the farmer) and focusing on the specificity of agricultural areas in the production process by engaging the private sector by opening the field of investment to it and supporting it during production, and to facilitate access to the world of smart agriculture and other industries Aiah because of the promise of promising results in achieving food security.

Key words: agricultural investment, food security, effective strategy, agriculture in Algeria.